I agree with her. I thought we discussed this by email previously and resolved that indeed the process had been followed and frankly was stunned when you raised this. Better communication? Or if you feel you were justified, then I'm not sure how you would expect me to respond?

Hello,

First, thank you for the meeting tonight. I can't imagine the stress that council members were feeling tonight. I appreciate your presence in our community tonight.

Second, I just wanted to share with you some thoughts about the interaction between the two of you. To me, it felt a lot like public shaming. With all the negative energy already in the room it didn't feel an appropriate moment to hash that out. I left feeling disappointed. I just ask that you please communicate better, before the meeting so you are both on the same page. I'm not saying this to be reprimanding, but offer it in the spirit of wanting to see our city council working together to continue positively building and shaping SLP to be its best.

Last, for what it's worth, I do support removing the pledge and feel there needs to be a separation of church and state. I do not think saying or not saying the pledge defines a persons patriotism.

With liberty and justice for all,

Miriam Zien-Edgar
